Arizona Bandits Stop a Train.

TUCSON (A. T.), Jan. 31.—The west-bound Southern Pacific overland known as No. 20, was held up Wednesday night a few miles this side of Wilcox, and the express car was robbed. No one was injured.

It is thought that the bandits got many thousands of dollars from Wells Fargo & Co.'s through safe.

This was one of the most daring train robberies in the history of the Territory. There were many of them before the enactment of the capital punishment law.

Officers are now in pursuit of the robbers, who, it is thought, have by this time reached the Mexican side of the line, where it is easy for those fleeing from justice to evade their pursuers, owing to the sparsely settled and mountainous country, abounding almost inaccessible fastness.

A few minutes before the train left Wilcox, and as it was moving from the station, a messenger named Young discovered two men on the blind postal car. One of them offered him a dollar if he would pass them to the Dagoon summit. Young at once replied that he could not do this, and ordered them to get off the train.

They refused, and when he attempted to eject them, one of them commanded him to lay down his lantern on the platform and do everything they said, else they would bore him full of big holes. As he spoke Young looked down the barrels of two six-shooters in the hands of one of the men, also that of a Winchester rifle which the other fellow drew from beneath a heavy overcoat. Young did as ordered.

About this time Fireman J. Johnson, who was on the tender, heard the men talking, and thinking that Young was having trouble with a couple of tramps, made a remark to him. The robbers lost no time in covering Johnson. They got upon the tender, taking Young with them.

Engineer Zeigler took in the situation at once and offered no resistance when the bandits pointed their weapons at him.

The train had now reached a point about two miles out from Wilcox, and at the command of the robbers it was brought to a standstill. One of the men remained on the engine with Ziegler, while the other took the brakemen and firemen to the express car and ordered them to cut off the express and postal cars, the latter of which was nearest to the engine.

The robber, with Engineer Ziegler, upon receiving a signal from his confederate, started down the road, leaving the brakeman and fireman with the disconnected passenger coaches and sleepers. The engine and express car and postal car proceeded a mile or so and then came to a standstill. One of the robbers had told the engineer to stop when he saw a small camp fire and two men by the roadside, but no fire was seen.

In the meantime Messenger G. W. Mitchell, who was in the Maricopa-station robbery several months ago, when he lost his watch, all the local money and nearly his life, had discovered that something was wrong. He gathered all the local money in a sack and jumped a short distance from where the second stop was made. He made his escape undiscovered by the bandits and lost no time in returning to Wilcox to give the alarm.

No sooner had the train come to a standstill than the robbers ordered Ziegler down from the engine. They approached the express car and handed the engineer a coal pick with which they told him to break in the door. They cried to the messenger, not knowing that he was gone, to open it, and, not receiving an answer, they came to the conclusion that he was lying inside waiting to shoot at the first opportunity.

After Ziegler had broken open the door the bandits told him to enter the car threatening to kill him and the messenger both if they tried to do "bunked work."

As soon as Ziegler got inside the car he assured the robbers that the messenger was not there and he was soon joined by one of them, the other remaining outside.

A small safe, which proved to be empty, was first blown open with a dynamite cartridge, and then the robber turned his attention to the big through safe. He stood off and told Ziegler what to do. It took five charges of dynamite to accomplish the work.

In the car were eighteen sacks of Mexican dollars, each containing $1000 and weighing sixty pounds. Several of these were placed on the dynamite cartridges, which the robber compelled the engineer to put on top of the safe and touch off. The robber and the engineer protected themselves by keeping behind the boxes when the terrific explosions occurred.

The reports could be distinctly heard by the passengers on the detached cars down the road more than two miles away and by the people of Wilcox. The Mexican dollars were scattered all over the vicinity, and the car was badly wrecked, the top and sides being knocked into kindling.

The big safe withstood the force of the explosion of four cartridges before it was in such condition that the robbers could take out the money and valuables it held.

They had only six of the deadly explosives when they commenced operations. The first was used on the small safe, and four had been used on the large safe without the desired results having been accomplished. All of the remaining bags of silver dollars were piled on the last cartridge and the fuse lighted by the engineer. The explosion was the heaviest of all and the great safe was open.

The bandit who during all this time had kept watch outside of the car hastened in and all that was in the safe was placed in a sack. Having removed everything, the robbers thanked the engineer for what he had done and disappeared in the night. A little later the sound of horses' hoofs was heard, and then it was known that the bandits were gone.

Women Will Vote.

Word has been received from the president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Nichols, of Prospect, Adelaide, South Australia, that adult suffrage has been carried, giving all women the right to vote on the same terms as men, and with no barrier to a seat in Parliament. This bill now only waits the Queen's consent.

Mrs. Nichols writes: "It is a grand victory after a hard and well-fought battle of seven years, in which the W. C. T. U. has done its fair share of the fighting."

Up to date the subscriptions to the San Francisco and Bakersfield Railroad amount to $1,275,000. Additional subscriptions are coming in every day, and the road will be completed a great deal in advance of schedule.

The new arrangements of Oakland were railroaded through the Legislature with more than ordinary speed. Mayor Pardee and County Assessor H. P. Dalton were the engineers for the occasion.

The Call is making improvements every day under the new management which is young and vigorous.

SUICIDE OF A. E. SPAULDING

He Preferred Death Rather Than Pain and Misery.

Two or three months ago mention was made in the GAZETTE of an accident happening to two men by the name of Spaulding and McCloud. They attempted to drive through a narrow passage way between A. H. Broad's office and Wakeham's paint shop on Stanford Place. The rear end of the opening was too small and the men were badly hurt, particularly A. E. Spaulding. The injury was so serious that it affected his mind. Within a week, in conversation with a gentleman on the avenue, he said he "wished to God that it had killed him then."

He has evidently been very despondent and he committed the rash act in somewhat methodical manner. At about 10:30 this morning Spaulding went into George H. Stricker's cigar store on the corner of Center street and Shattuck avenue and gave to Mr. Rod Cameron an electric battery which he had been using. From there he immediately proceeded up the street to Durgin & Blakeley's Undertaking rooms, passed in the door, through the store, out into the back yard and into a barn. Here he laid down upon some hay and taking a pistol out shot himself through the heart.

Mr. Wilson, an employee in the store, noticed him go through the room and a minute or so later heard a pistol shot. Running out to learn he beheld the body of Spaulding with a pistol in his right hand and some papers which had fallen from his left hand. Wilson went out onto the street as quick as possible and happened to meet Mr. W. A. Nash, editor of the GAZETTE, who immediately proceeded to the scene of death. Mr. Nash gathered up the loose papers and turned them over to Constable Brotherton who had just come to see what the trouble was. There were four different pieces of paper written upon and the contents were as follows:

To the people of Berkeley:

It seems to me unfair for us mechanics and laborers to do all the town work by contract, while a few old maids come in and teach our schools five or six hours a day and sweep off all our hard earned money. Our schools should be taught by contract, being let from one to three years. Just as smart people walk the streets every day who would teach the schools just as well for one-half the money.

A. E. SPAULDING.

The following was to his wife:

MY DEAR WIFE—As you do not wish any girl to take care of our baby I think it is better that I take her along with me, as she will only live a few years and wear your life out. The undertaker will take the carriage for his pay. My last word is for you to go to Reno to live for ever and get your health back. Get a lady to rub you according to my little book, my little boy also, oiling him 'all over each night with sweet oil. He will be of use to you if he lives, but never in this climate. Love to all. You have been a good and lovely wife. SPAULDING.

In addition to this he directs some money to be sent to Mrs. Cummings and Edward McDonald of Nevada, and suggests that he be buried in Sacramento.

Another long letter was found directed to the Industrial Army, saying that he sympathized with them. In it his mind appears to wander.

The last note which he probably wrote reads as follows: "Take me to undertaking parlors. Place me in a coffin just as I am. Tell my wife I died with heart failure. If I fail to die take me to receiving hospital. Wife send no telegrams. Letters will do."

Mr. Spaulding resided on Ellsworth street with his family, consisting of his wife, two daughters and a son. He was upwards of 45 years of age. An inquest will be held this afternoon in Oakland by the County Coroner.

A deputy coroner came from Oakland and was going to take the body away, when he was arrested at the instance of the Health Officer. The case was immediately taken before Judge Lord, who allowed the accused to go on his own recognizance. In the meantime the Court will examine into the law for such cases made and provided.

Uncle Sam's Sickness.

F. F. Jewell, D. D., Chancellor of the University of the Pacific has consented to give a lecture at the West Berkeley Methodist Church on Saturday evening, February 2nd. His subject is, "Uncle Sam's Sickness, Cause and Cure." The lecture is free and everybody is invited to attend.

The present Legislature can hardly believe that reform should commence at home. They recently abandoned all business for one night's revelry in the halls built for State purposes only.

The Retrenchment Committee of the Legislature are very likely to cut the heads off of quite a number of unnecessary attaches. It will save the State quite a sum of money.

When the Agricultural Bureau of the University of California comes to be thoroughly examined, it will be found that the public press has made a mountain out of a mole hill.

Respectable citizens of Vallejo are banding themselves together for protection against the rough element which infests that city.

A full ticket has been nominated in Oakland for the coming city election by the People's party.

BODY SNATCHING.

The public occasionally hear of things of this kind when medical colleges are in want of subjects for treatment and it is considered a most outrageous act. There are other kinds of doing the same thing but not in the interest of medical science. In the latter case the almighty dollar prevails. Recently a man committed suicide in the county of Alameda but not in the city of Oakland. The breath was hardly out of the man's body before a semi-official appeared on the ground and, although the family of the deceased had ordered a local undertaker to take charge of the corpse and place it in a coffin, the aforesaid official took the body and placed it in the wagon of an out of town undertaker and was proceeding to his headquarters when the Health Officer of the town put in an appearance and had the hasty official arrested. Going before a magistrate a hearing was had and the Court allowed the arrested party to depart on his own recognizance, as the Judge was not thoroughly posted on the law.

Where what appears to be an outrage comes in. The Coroner refuses to hold an inquest in the town where the death occurred but forcibly carries the deceased several miles away, summoning all the witnesses in the case to leave their places of business and immediately appear before the Court of the High Executioner.

In a case of this kind it is probable that much stronger language should be used to fit it. The foreign undertaker may be a friend or not of the Coroner. He will certainly be placed in a position to earn a good fee. Well, business is business, and we suppose that the world is filled with what belongs to the good and bad class. If this action does not belong in the latter category where will you place it?

A. J. Read, foreman of the Enquirer job office, has been re-elected President of the Oakland Typographical Union, No. 36, by acclamation.

Chief Engineer Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is expected to arrive in San Francisco next week.

Judging from the amount of kicking at it, the inaugural ball must have been a football affair, with an exceptional rush line.

There is some danger of a fight between Mexico on one side and all of the Central American States on the other.

The Government gold reserve was reduced yesterday down to $44,551,322.

From bad management the whisky trust has become hopelessly insolvent.

WILL BERKELEY SUBSCRIBE?

It will not be at all surprising if the San Joaquin valley railroad enterprise should gather in the California and Nevada railroad and thus make the Smith mole of some use. Some time ago when the Smith Electric Road deal was in full blast an attempt was made to get up a land boom alongside of the narrow guage track in Berkeley. The chances are if the narrow guage road is gobbled up that there will be a large speculation in Berkeley lands. By the way, how much are the capitalists of this University town going to subscribe to the new enterprise? Would it not be well for the Board of Trustees to get up a resolution of intention in this matter?

The law giving women a right to vote in California stands a good chance of being passed by the present Legislature. Should it not pass now it will be so worked that it will go along all night at the next session. Fond hopes must be encouraged.
